

Independent trials in Benin, Burkina Faso, Tanzania and Ivory Coast have proven the efficacy of

LIMBURGERHOF, Germany, July 13, 2017/

- WHO recommendation for game-changing mosquito net.
- First bed net to contain non-pyrethroid chemistry.
- Collaboration with IVCC and London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine unlocks breakthrough

BASF (www.BASF.com) has received a recommendation from the World Health Organization

Working with the Innovative Vector Control Consortium (IVCC) and the London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine

Dave Malone, IVCC Technical Manager, said “The collaboration with BASF gave us access to an insecticide

A second chlorfenapyr[®] product, an indoor residual spray (IRS), is also in the final phases of WHO evaluation.

Around the world, every two minutes a child dies from malaria and there are more than 200 million new

Long-lasting insecticide-treated mosquito nets (LN) and indoor residual sprays (IRS) are the cornerstone

Independent trials in Benin, Burkina Faso, Tanzania and Ivory Coast have proven the efficacy of Interceptor

Medical entomologist Professor Hilary Ranson from the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine has studied

Following the WHO recommendation, BASF will start preparations to launch Interceptor G2 for malaria

“New resistance management products are desperately needed to prevent mosquito-borne diseases and

About chlorfenapyr

Chlorfenapyr was derived www.BASF.com by isolating a toxin from the Streptomyces fumanus actinomycete bacterium.

About BASF's Crop Protection division

With a rapidly growing www.BASF.com population, the world is increasingly dependent on modern technology to develop and manage

About BASF

At BASF (www.BASF.com), we create chemistry www.BASF.com for a sustainable future. We combine expertise

SOURCE

BASF

Multimedia content

- Download logo

- Image: Interceptor® G2 from BASF is the first WHO-recommended mosquito net based on non-pyrethroid chemistry to beat insecticide-resistant mosquitoes. Its distinctive black and white stripes distinguish it from currently used mosquito nets. Volker Frenz, development chemist for Interceptor® G2, checks a net sample in the laboratory. Photo – Andres/BASF

- Image: Interceptor® G2 from BASF is the first WHO-recommended mosquito net based on non-pyrethroid chemistry to beat insecticide-resistant mosquitoes. Its distinctive black and white stripes distinguish it from currently used products. Photo – Andres/BASF

- Image: Interceptor® G2 from BASF is the first WHO-recommended mosquito net based on non-pyrethroid chemistry to beat insecticide-resistant mosquitoes. Its distinctive black and white stripes distinguish it from currently used products. Photo – Andres/BASF

- Image: Mosquitoes are the most dangerous animal on earth – transmitting diseases such as malaria, dengue, Zika and yellow fever and causing more deaths than any other creature. Photo – Hantzschel/BASF

- Image: There are more than 200 million cases of malaria each year and almost half a million deaths. Infants, children under five and pregnant women are the most vulnerable groups. Photo – Lassen/BASF

- Image: There are more than 200 million cases of malaria each year and almost half a million deaths. Infants, children under five and pregnant women are the most vulnerable groups. Most cases occur in Africa, but other regions are significantly affected: Latin America, South East Asia, Western Pacific and Eastern Mediterranean. Photo – Hantzschel/BASF